Superintendent's Highlights

The highlights of the 1997-98 school year relate to several special projects funded by grants from various sources. The J. A. and Kathryn Albertson Foundation contributed $52,000 to support the second year of integrating fine arts into the curriculum at Elk City and $70,000 for district-wide development of Achievement Level Testing facilitated by Northwest Evaluation Association. Twenty-four teachers wrote the tests for language usage, reading, and math in June with piloting scheduled for fall of 1998. The Idaho Community Foundation funded a K-2 fire ecology curriculum at Grangeville Elementary School for $919, children's theatre after-school program for Clearwater Valley students for $15,000, the Clearwater Valley Elementary School outdoor classroom for $8,750, and Art Moms and Dads at Riggins Elementary School for $7,500. The Elk City School and the schools at Clearwater Valley successfully combined forces to develop Communities Creating Connections, a three-year project incorporating locally based knowledge and learning with natural resource and arts links funded by Annenberg Rural Challenge at $164,000 per year. The high schools at Riggins, Kooskia, and Elk City are seeking to ensure relevance and rigor in curriculum through participation in the Idaho Management of Change Project. Other grants including several for technology have been received as well. Throughout the district, students, staff, parents, and patrons are energized by this support, collaborating to improve education for all District 241 students.
